

Pact for Prosperity, People and the Planet (4P)

DECLARATION

Doubling down on constructive multilateralism to deliver prosperity for people and the planet in Seville and beyond

June 2025

Two years after the Summit for a New Global Financial Pact (June 2023), the world is facing growing uncertainties, geopolitical tensions and intersecting crises – from extreme poverty, rising inequalities and economic turmoil to climate change, pollution and biodiversity loss.

In this context, we, the 4P Community, gathered in Sevilla for the Fourth International Conference on Financing for Development (FfD-4), affirm the imperative of a reinvigorated multilateralism to collectively face current and emerging challenges and to achieve inclusive, equitable, and sustainable growth and development.

We recognize that addressing climate change, pollution, biodiversity loss and fighting poverty are inextricably linked, and re-affirm our commitment to the goals of the Pact for Prosperity, People and the Planet (4P) to pursue an ambitious and impactful reform of the international financial architecture, to enhance its resilience and effectiveness, to promote innovative financing tools and to leverage public and private investment so that ‘no country should have to choose between fighting poverty and preserving the planet’.

We are committed to contributing actively and constructively to the success of FfD4 and the implementation of actions conducive to improving the impact and effectiveness of financing for development. Together with other key international milestones such as the Thirtieth Conference of the Parties to the UNFCCC (COP30) in Belem and the G20 Johannesburg Summit (22-23 November 2025), Sevilla offers a critical opportunity to uphold the principles of the 4P.

In this regard, the 4P community notes that the 4P Secretariat and individual members are contributing to the FfD-4 in Seville in various configurations to launch, advance or support numerous initiatives, for instance to ensure the implementation of a core set of recommendations from the Expert Review on Debt, Nature and Climate and improve the global debt architecture; advance global solidarity levies; tackle barriers to investments in Emerging Markets and Developing Economies through a 4P Eminent Persons Group; better reflect multidimensional vulnerability beyond GDP into resources allocations; scale-up pre-arranged financing; support the development of public markets; and others.

Looking ahead, the 4P will continue to offer all interested countries and partners an opportunity to work together in an inclusive and action-oriented way to give ourselves the means to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, leaving no one behind.

To this end, the 4P will launch a reflection on its role and vision after 2025, in view of making a strong contribution to key milestones in 2026-27.

To achieve this ambition, we recognize the need to reinforce inclusivity of the 4P through enhanced governance and processes. We commend the support of the 4P Special Envoy ad interim and thank the OECD for the continued hosting of a dynamic and effective 4P Secretariat.

We welcome the new 4P Special Envoy H.E. Mr. Moussa Faki - former chairperson of the Africa Union Commission and former Prime Minister of Chad - to amplify the impact of the 4P.
